It is estimated that fully 1,000 relatives and friends of the 143 officers and men who left here today under command of Lieutenant Colonel Vincent M. King, gathered at the railroad station to honor the defensive forces. Many affecting scenes were witnessed, when gray-haired fathers and mothers kissed their sons, hus-bands in uniform pressed babies to their breasts, while wives held the short but heavy Springfields of the men, and pleas for safety and written word was made by the gally dressed but hopeful sweethearts and friends

On the special train destined direct for New London, nine cars were required to hold the troops, which included three companies from Bridgeport, and Medical Corps and Band and two companies from Stamford, one company from Norwalk, one company from Greenwich, one company from Danbury, making a total of 588 officers and men.

The battalion under command of Lieut. Col. King, with First Lieutenant Arthur L. Larocque as adjutant, includes:
